

Transportation Reimbursement Accounts

Your commute won't take less time. But it will cost less money.

Over the past several years, changes Congress made to Internal Revenue Code Section 132(f) created the possibility for employee pre-tax elections under such programs, but the operational rules were not clear. Under current regulations, employers may offer employer-provided parking, vanpooling, and mass transit passes as a tax-free benefit pursuant to an elective pre-tax salary reduction arrangement. The amount by which the employee's pay is reduced and the value of the parking, vanpooling and/or transit benefits provided to the employee is excluded from compensation for both income and FICA taxes.

What is a transportation reimbursement account?

Under Section 132(f) of the Internal Revenue Code, a qualified transportation benefit reimbursement program allows your employer to offer you the opportunity to set aside a portion of your salary pre-tax, to pay for certain transit, parking and vanpooling commuting expenses.

Qualified parking expenses include: Parking a vehicle in a facility that is near your workplace or parking at a location from where you commute to work (e.g., train station, or by carpool).

Qualified mass transit expenses include: Pass, tokens, fare card, voucher or other item that entitles you to use mass transit for the purpose of traveling to and from work.

Qualified vanpooling expenses include transportation to and from work in a "commuter highway vehicle" (a vehicle with a seating capacity of six or more adults). The Sentinel Benny Card now works as an approved form of payment with uberPOOL and Lyft Line. These are services that match people going to the same place to share an eligible vanpool vehicle.

Statutory Limits

The 2019 statutory dollar limits for this plan are:

- ▶ $265 per month for parking
- ▶ $265 per month for vanpooling and transit passes

The Regulations state that the employer may provide the parking or vanpooling benefit by reimbursing the employee in cash for expenses the employee has paid. The employer does not have to provide the actual parking facility or vanpooling or arrange for direct payment for such services.

How Does It Work?

The transportation benefit covers only employees of the plan sponsor and does not cover dependents, independent contractors, volunteers and/or vendors.

It is similar to the pre-tax flexible spending accounts available for medical expenses and dependent care. One important difference, however, is that unused balances in a Transportation Reimbursement Account can be rolled over from month to month or year to year within the same account. Maximum reimbursement cannot exceed the IRS limit in any single month. For 2019, the parking limit is $265/mo. and the transit and vanpooling limit is $265/mo.

Sentinel Benefits offers the Benny Debit Card to accommodate you purchasing transit passes using pre-tax funds. If the transit system you wish to utilize has an employer transit pass program, your employer is not allowed to reimburse you in cash for those expenses, therefore, in order to participate in the transit program, you will need to sign up for the Benny Card and use this card to purchase your transit pass with pre-tax funds.

While there is no specific “use-it-or-lose-it” rule, unused funds are forfeited by you at the time you terminate employment or the employer terminates the plan, whichever occurs first.

How Much Will You Save?

You will save all income and payroll taxes on the amount of money provided for commuting benefits. Due to the tax savings, you could save more than $900 in annual commuting costs. Note: This example assumes a 33% combined Federal and State income tax rate and the Social Security taxes paid by employees.
